I’m going to try that one!

Welcome to the APPI Quarteira Seminar, welcome to the Escola Secundária Dr^a Laura Ayres, for an exciting professional development meeting of teachers of English in the Algarve.

During a full Saturday - March 7 - delegates will have an opportunity to meet what is at stake in the central topic “I’m going to try that one!”, by participating in a comprehensive offer of sessions – six - which will provide them with fresh ideas and tips for teaching the language at all levels, as well as guidance and suggestions for professional development in a range of critical issues. In fact, a diversity of practical issues pertaining to English teaching and learning, together with a choice of essential aspects of ELT, will be covered by experienced professionals who will inspire lesson planning, ways of doing and assessment.

Every APPI Seminar is organized with hard work and great gusto and aimed at making a difference in delegates’ classroom work and their students’ performance.

This particular Seminar has been made possible thanks to the motivated support of the board of the host school APPI is in debt to. A warm Thank-You goes to our local member and teacher Maria João Soares who has liaised with her school board and APPI for making it happen.

APPI is also most thankful to the team of qualified speakers who have answered APPI’s call for the Seminário. Thanks very much to all of those for the significant help and goodwill granted.

The APPI Executive Committee wishes delegates and speakers a high-quality, fruitful meeting.

‘Shake it up! – Listen, sing and act’

My first English words were learnt through a song at the age of 9. By that time I didn’t get the whole meaning of the lyrics. But the most important ones stayed forever. Do you remember your “first” English song, chant or rhyme? Do you still sing it? How and Why? I intend to share some songs, chants and rhymes that usually work out well. Some of them are well known but not in the way we know. Be prepared to shake it up and “to try that one”!
